Monthly money and cash timing

For Nov 1, 2026 to Nov 30, 2026, monthly remaining money is ₱2,000 after recorded essential expenses, existing obligations not already deducted, and the proposed repayment. The lowest dated end-of-day balance is ₱1,000; the closing balance is ₱11,000. No dated shortage appears in this recorded cycle. A monthly total and a dated cash balance answer different questions. Moving a repayment date does not remove an overall monthly shortfall.

Assumptions and sources

This review uses the recorded evidence for Nov 1, 2026 to Nov 30, 2026. Opening spendable cash: ₱9,000. Opening cash is excluded from monthly remaining money. Loan proceeds are reserved for the financed purchase and excluded from household spendable cash. Obligations already deducted from take-home pay are counted only once. Dates represent end-of-day balances, not intraday spending or future cycles. Member-reported circumstances are statements, not independently verified documents.

Remaining concerns

No failed check is recorded for the selected option. Loan proceeds are reserved for the purchase and excluded from spendable cash. End-of-day balances do not model intraday timing or unreported events. These modeled figures are not a guarantee of affordability or future wellbeing; unreported events and changing circumstances may affect household needs.
